Mountain bike trails

Paragraph 1

Q15: Growing sport

If you enjoy cycling and want to avoid the traffic clogging up our roads then why not join the growing number of people who go mountain biking? With a decent bike you can keep fit and cycle off-road in stunning countryside all over the UK. You can also make new friends. Choosing a route to suit your ability level is essential so here are some suggestions of great mountain bike trails you can try.

Paragraph 2

<-- [Q4 Subheading: 'Easy start' = Para 2]

Q1: Cromer route

The 14 mile Cromer to Felbrigg trail in Norfolk is fairly straightforward. The terrain is quite rocky and includes grass, loose stones, sand and vehicle ruts. However, there are some stretches of tarmac that make for easier riding. There are one or two steep hills to test you out and you will enjoy great views from the top of Beacon Hill, Norfolk's highest point.

Paragraph 3

Q1: Lakeside Way

A bit more challenging is the 27 mile Lakeside Way in Kielder, Northumberland where you will encounter plenty of sharp rises and descents. This is a purpose-built, all-weather trail and provides a great opportunity to explore an exhilarating landscape. You can see birds like herons and ospreys as well as historic Kielder Castle and Kielder Dam.

Paragraph 4

<-- [Q4 Subheading: 'Hardest test' = Para 4]

Q12a: 'enough'

Once you gain sufficient skill and confidence, the spectacular 22 mile Nan Bield Pass route in the Lake District provides a super-tough challenge. The steep climbs and descents in a landscape scattered with loose boulders will test both your cycling ability and endurance. The hard riding required will be rewarded by views with the wow factor and thrilling descents.

Q3: 'D' Informal

Q3: 'E' Informal

Paragraph 5

<-- [Q4 Subheading: 'Town rides' = Para 5]

If these locations are too far away from where you live, check out what routes are available closer to home. Even if you live in a town, there may be some urban trails available or some more scenic routes in the surrounding countryside.

Beginners' guide to mountain biking

by Chris Alston

Q8a: Adrenaline

Q15: Booming

I enjoy everything about mountain biking, particularly the adrenaline rush it produces as well as the time I spend in the great outdoors. Mountain biking is not just about rocks, bumps and dips. There are local bridleways and open moorlands that can be enjoyed and the sport is accessible to anyone who can ride a bike and wants some real adventure in their life.

Q7a/b: Text box

Some forestry trails can be ridden on a fairly standard, cheap and cheerful bike with front suspension, but if you wish to tackle a more challenging landscape, you may want to buy a full suspension mountain bike, which will provide a more comfortable ride. Any bike shop can give you advice – just visit the one in your local area.

It doesn't matter how old you are as all ages can enjoy mountain biking and the sport is booming. You'll be pleasantly surprised by how many local opportunities for mountain biking exist. You can find beginners' courses across the country and the Cycling UK website is a good place to look for a heads-up about events in your area. You could even become a fully-fledged leader, guiding groups on off-road routes and trails.

Q5: Advance notice

To anyone who is nervous about trying mountain biking, I say give it a go as it is not as scary as you might think. If you already have bike skills, you will be fine. You can make it as easy or as difficult as you like and you can always hire the equipment you will need before committing to buying, just in case mountain biking is not for you. Rising numbers of people love it – the thrill of riding through forests and areas off the beaten track is amazing and there are numerous benefits for mental health and physical wellbeing. Plus, there are many social benefits from riding with a group, meeting new people and making new friends.

Q5: Qualified leader

Chris Alston is an experienced mountain bike leader who works as a Development Officer for Cycling UK.
