Subject: Charity Day

Dear Sam, [Friendly Salutation]

I am writing in response to your email regarding our upcoming annual Charity Day. Organising this event is a fantastic opportunity to bring our colleagues together, improve team morale, and raise vital funds for worthwhile local charities in our community. [Purpose & Enthusiasm] [Complex sentence]

I really like the idea of holding a homemade cake sale because freshly baked treats are always very popular during morning coffee breaks. However, washing cars might be impractical if the weather is rainy, and wearing silly clothes can sometimes make visiting clients feel uncomfortable. Instead, I suggest organising a sponsored five-kilometre walk in the nearby park. A community walk is inclusive because people of all fitness levels can participate together. In addition, charging a modest five-pound registration fee and asking local businesses for raffle prizes would boost our fundraising total significantly. [Critique of Ideas] [Contrastive 'However'] [Sponsored Walk] [Fundraising Strategy]

To help with the event, I would be delighted to bake a selection of chocolate muffins and savoury pastries for the cake stall. Furthermore, I can design colourful promotional posters to display across our office, set up tables and chairs on the morning of the event, and stay late afterwards to help count donations and tidy up. Please let me know if you would like to discuss these ideas further during our team meeting tomorrow.

Best regards,

Jordan Bennett

Task 2

Information

You have new neighbours and they are causing the following problems:

- constant noise
- rubbish everywhere
- parties at night.

Last week you tried to talk to them about the problems, but they would not listen.

You decide to complain to the council.

Writing Task

Write a complaint about your neighbours on the council web form.

In your complaint, you should:

- describe the problems with your new neighbours
- explain the effects of these problems on your life.

You should aim to write about 150 to 200 words.
