1. Write an email

You are an employee at a company.

The company you work for is considering allowing members of staff to take one paid day off to do some training that would benefit them at work. The training needs to be both affordable and add value to the company, as well as being of benefit to the employee. They want interested members of staff to apply.

Write an email to your manager. The email should describe what training you would like to attend and explain how it would benefit you.

Your manager's email address is: manager@mail.biz

Your email should be at least 250 words.

You can use a real or imagined company.

2. Write a review

You want to enter a competition to win a family annual pass to a theme park.

To enter the competition, the organisers want to read a review about 'best ever group days out', either with family or friends.

Write a review of the best day out you have had with either family or friends. The review should describe where you went, what you did and explain why that day was so memorable.

Your review should be at least 250 words.

You can use a real or imagined day out.
