The writer emphasises their vulnerability by describing the fish as 'fragile' and uses a statistic to explain that '75% of fish poisoned with cyanide die within hours of capture', highlighting the lethal nature of the fish trade. The writer also shows sympathy for the fish that survive the process of capture, emphasising that the fish lose their freedom as they are 'robbed of their natural habitats' and 'forced to spend their lives in glass tanks'.

1 4 Compare Source A and Source C. Write about what they say and how the material is conveyed.

You may wish to refer to the level of detail, presentation and language, formality, possible bias and how the writers come across.

[6 marks]

Source A uses emotive language to convey the writer's view that people should not keep fish in captivity. The writer emphasises that the fish 'suffer miserably' when they are 'robbed of their natural habitats'. Source C gives a very different view of keeping fish in tanks, using emotive language to encourage readers to have 'wonderful experiences' as they visit the 'wonders of the sea' in the tanks at the Sea Life Centre.

Both texts use emotive language to achieve their purposes- Source A argues that fish should not be kept in tanks, giving the opinion that 'fish are beautiful; keeping them in tanks is not'. In contrast, Source C has a persuasive purpose as it aims to encourage people to visit the Sea Life Centre and 'be mesmerised by the enchanting' creatures living in captivity. As Source A has been written by 'PETA', an organisation biased towards animal welfare, whilst Source C has been written by the 'Sea Life Centre', which profits from keeping fish in captivity, it is unsurprising that these two sources give opposite viewpoints.
