First day in a new job

Q8a: Clothing rules

Be prepared

Q9a: Heading

Congratulations – you've got a new job. Now you need to prepare for the first day. Re-read the job description so you're clear about what's expected of you. Have another look at the company website to update yourself on the latest information and check the dress code. Work out your route there and think about transport. Collect the documents you need to take with you, like proof of your address.

Get off to the right start

It's essential to be punctual on your first day – take care over your appearance and have a suitable workbag. Introduce yourself to people you meet and make sure you smile and look enthusiastic – this will impress everyone straightaway. Take a folder to keep any material you're given.

Learn names and roles

Aim to learn the names of people, especially those you're going to be working with – it's helpful to find out people's roles and responsibilities too. You'll be given lots of information on the first day so have something with you to note down the things you need to remember.

Become involved

It can be difficult on the first day to know what to do, but if there's an opportunity, offer to help out with a task or sit in on a meeting – and ask plenty of questions. You could also make cups of tea (take your own mug) – this will demonstrate you're willing and eager to be part of the team.

Know your workplace

Q8b: Boss/Supervisor

Make sure you get to know the layout of the building – the location of the toilets, the staff restroom and the fire exits. It's useful to know where your line manager is based and how to get to the canteen – you may be given a work buddy to help you. The first day is exhausting – but everything will become more familiar and easier as the weeks go by. Good luck!

MFS ACTIVE READING GUIDE · TEXT C (FORUM: QUESTIONS 10·15)

· Purpose: Online forum sharing tips for your first day at work (Chas's grandad Q10, time off Q14).
