Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to put my friend forward for your television show, 'Eat the World'. You said in your advert that you were looking for someone who loves home-cooking, and that exactly defines my friend.

She is originally from Japan so she has a rich cultural background to draw on that is wildly different from the UK, in terms of culture and cuisines. One of the (many) reasons I am suggesting her for the show is that she is a world-class expert in making dishes like sushi and gyoza.

Additionally, I feel my friend would bring some much-needed diversity and passion to the show. This is because her family has been passing down recipes for generations, so there is a long line of history behind the dishes, creating a sentimental aspect to her story that would work amazingly on your show. Why would you not consider her?

She has an exciting range of television experience already, with knowledge of the 'behind-the-scenes' processes and a comfortability on camera that cannot be replicated.

Looking forward to hearing from you and seeing my amazing friend on your show!

Yours faithfully,

John Smith

Stray Dog situation solved through simple solution?

Anyone who has lived in Leeds for some time knows the stray dog catastrophe we have unfolding before us. More than 50 dogs have been seen running the streets with no collars or owners to identify them. They are now even forming sub packs and starting fights with other dogs on leads. This simply cannot continue! With owners reaching breaking point, one poor dog owner spoke to me about the issue, saying 'I'm scared to take my tiny Jack Russell out these days as he's at risk of being attacked by the stray dog packs'.

Desperate over the rapidly worsening situation in the area, I attended a community meeting on the issue and found out the law has thankfully recently changed in our favour. Since April 2016, dogs are required, by law, to be microchipped. While some people may be against putting a foreign object into their beloved pets, this law is massively helpful to the cause.

Not only can you get your darling dog microchipped completely free at any Dogs Trust centre but it also does not hurt the dog at all, it can swiftly reunite lost dogs and owners and ultimately saves the taxpayer money. This is because local authorities get to spend less precious time and money housing stray dogs. I would highly recommend getting your dog microchipped, not only for your own peace of mind but to be part of a community effort to get these dogs off the streets and into the safe, loving homes that they deserve.
